Family Literacy Resource

Madison Metropolitan School District
Curriculum & Instruction
Dear Families,

We are excited to be able to continue to support you and your child with gaining meaningful literacy experiences inside and outside of school.

Please review these resources, which we hope will provide your family with valuable information about what your child is learning in school as well as good books to read and exciting things to do around the city of Madison that will support your children’s literacy development. If you would like to access these resources electronically, go to www.mmsd.org/literacy.

We are pleased to work with you in building a family of readers and writers.

Sincerely,

Tamara Maxwell
Literacy Coordinator

The District’s Standards for Literacy

The district’s standards for literacy provide a roadmap for what children need to know and be able to do, beginning in kindergarten through twelfth grade. The standards challenge children to think critically and solve complex problems to get them ready for college, career, and community. The standards clarify what it is that children need to know and be able to do at each grade level for reading, writing, speaking, listening, and language use. You can also look at the grade levels behind and ahead to see the progression of skills on the continuum. This can help you support your child in learning at home.

Also, the Read Up, Speak Out, Write On Resource provides grade-level questions you can ask your child that will support his or her understanding of the standards.

For more grade-level resources, go to https://literacy.madison.k12.wi.us/family-resources.
MMSD Literacy Curriculum

Children in grades K-5 have a literacy block with a recommended 120-minutes of daily instruction. During this time, children are reading, writing, speaking, listening, and working with language within a workshop model, in which a skill or concept is introduced and practiced until children can do it independently.

Reading Instruction

During reading instruction, children learn what it means to be a reader - how readers apply their early reading skills and strategies to understand what they are reading. Children engage in shared reading experiences of grade-level texts where both the teacher and the children are reading the text together. Teachers also work with small groups of children with similar reading instructional needs. These groups are flexible and change as a result of how the children are doing. During independent reading, children self-select and practice reading texts on their own or with a partner in order to practice applying both known and developing skills and concepts. Children have the opportunity to read for pleasure, be independent problem solvers, and improve reading fluency. We use Mondo Bookshop as our core resource.

Writing Instruction

During writing instruction, children learn what it means to be a writer - how writers think, plan, draft, revise, edit, and publish their work. Children use the writing process to develop and strengthen their writing when thinking about what it is they are writing, for whom they are writing, and what their purpose is for writing. Children engage in shared writing experiences where both the teacher and the children are writing together. Teachers also work with small groups of children with similar writing instructional needs. These groups are flexible and change as a result of student need. During independent writing, children self-select and practice writing on their own or with a partner in order to practice applying both known and developing skills and concepts. Children have the opportunity to write for multiple purposes, be independent problem solvers, and improve writing stamina. We use The Common Core Writing Book by Gretchen Owocki and mentor texts as our core resource and Units of Study for Writing by Lucy Calkins as our supplemental resource.

Speaking, and Listening, and Language Instruction

Speaking, listening, and language use are essential parts of literacy learning, and they are integrated within reading and writing instruction. Teachers provide safe and nurturing environments in which children are encouraged to participate effectively in a range of conversations and collaborations with multiple partners, using language to express their own ideas and build on the ideas of others. To support children’s speaking and listening skills, we use Mondo Bookshop “Let’s Talk About It” resource.

Early Literacy Skills Instruction

In Grades K-1, early literacy skills instruction is divided into small-group and whole-group instruction. During this time, teachers teach new skills and then provide opportunities for teacher guided and peer practice for skills mastery. Our core resource, Mondo Bookshop Phonics, follows a scope and sequence that introduces new skills along with reviewing cumulative skills in order to support children’s early reading. For children who need continued support with early literacy skills in Grades 2-5, they receive small group instruction where teachers explicitly teach new skills and then provide opportunities for teacher guided and peer practice for skill mastery. We use either Fountas and Pinnell or Mondo Phonics Intervention based on the intensity of need.

Handwriting Instruction

Handwriting instruction is sequenced by first introducing letters that are easier to form followed by grouping letters that are formed in similar ways. Teachers provide children with immediate feedback through supported practice. Practice pages with models and visual prompts indicate how to form letters. Our core resource is Print Path.
How to Support Your Child with Homework

Homework is an opportunity for children to practice what they are learning in school. Here are practical ideas for helping your child to successfully complete homework.

Reading and Writing Around the House

Opportunities to strengthen your child’s literacy development are all around the house!

Family Room

- Exchange Post-it® notes with your children. Put the notes on pillowcases or mirrors, or in lunch boxes, books, or any surprise location.
- Help children assemble photo albums of family events and write captions for the photos.
- Ask children to put their wishes and wants into writing and to suggest how they may work toward or contribute to getting what they want.
- Help children create a family newsletter or website to share with family members near and far.
- Create different ending to a television show you watch. Discuss it and act it out.
- Look through the television guide of programs and movies; list all the programs or show that start with a particular letter, blend, consonant cluster, etc.
- One family member uses descriptive words about an object. Other family members guess what the object is.
- Write stories about family events from the photos in your home.
- Turn on the closed caption function of the television instead of the volume.
- Compare and contrast the different photos of family members and discuss how they have changed over time. Write about it.
- Turn the television on mute during commercials and practice sight word flash cards.
- Compare and contrast movies or shows to books.
- Read to, for, or with your child.
- Play games that emphasize word building skills, promote vocabulary skills, and include dramatization such as Scrabble, Boggle, Charades, Guesstures, Taboo, etc.
- Give your child an old telephone to dramatize scenarios. Talking with your child while playing develops oral language skills.
- Include your child when you read, write, or use numbers. Have your child help when you write a grocery list, use a recipe, or look up a number in the phone book.
- Have your child cut out coupons. This improves eye-hand coordination and enhances number recognition skills.
- Cut out large letters from newspaper and magazine headlines. See how many words you can make together by moving the letters around.
- Cut comic strips apart and have your child put them back together in order.
- Make a “deck” of cards using index cards. Cut them in half and write words on the cards that are appropriate for your child’s level. Make two cards for each word. Play a memory game with the cards, placing all of them face down. Take turns to find pairs of words that match.
Dining Area/Kitchen

- Post messages on the refrigerator and around the kitchen for your child to practice reading.
- Make writing practical and useful by having children write grocery and task lists, reminders and phone messages, instructions for caring for pets, or directions for getting to the park.
- Make up words using the letters on the telephone keypad.
- Read recipes to help with following directions.
- Place magnetic letters on the refrigerator for letter recognition and making words.
- Read cereal and snack labels.
- Ask your child to find certain letters, words, and numbers on cereal boxes, clocks, stoves, etc.
- Ask your child to find words that rhyme.

Bedroom

- Read a bedtime story.
- Re-read a familiar bedtime story and ask your child to create a different ending.
- Write a bedtime story and recite it with your child every night.
- Leave a message or note for a family member on his/her mirror (e.g., “I love you very much!” or “Don’t forget to walk the dog.” or “Call me when you get home from school.”) to build fluent reading.
- Help your child make labels for things in his/her room and read the labels together.

Bathroom

- Read magazines and books while you are in the bathtub.
- Alphabetize, organize, and categorize toiletries.
- Label drawers according to contents.
- While your child is taking a bath, put different objects in the water—like a sponge or a ball—and guess whether it will sink or float.
- Use rubber or magnetic letters that stick to the tub walls to spell out names and words.
- Find objects or perform actions that rhyme around the bathroom, such as “floor” and “door,” or “brush” and “flush,” etc.
- Sing songs together during bath time. Children can sing their favorite songs and chants or recite poems or rhymes in the shower or bathtub.
- Write words with your finger(s) using shaving cream, bubble bath, foam, etc.
Neighborhood Walks

Opportunities to strengthen your child’s literacy development are all around your neighborhood!

- Walk around your neighborhood, note the different signs, and discuss the meaning/importance of them.
- Look around the bus. What are people reading/writing?
- When shopping in the stores, pay attention to the print available.
- Go to street fairs and festivals. What signs or public texts do you see?
- Take your child on a literacy walk and note the print available. Take photos along the way to create a story or album.
- Create a nature journals (old notebooks, paper folded like a book) for your children to record their adventures outside. Have your children decorate the cover. Ask your children to write about what they think they’ll find before they go out, draw pictures or write while exploring, or reflect on the trip when they get back home.
- Talk about the wildlife that is everywhere! You’ll be surprised how much life you can find in our urban parks. Insects living complex lives in grass or landscaping, birds nesting in trees or on buildings, and bats hunting insects after dark are only some of the things you may find.
- Look for birds and talk to your children about what the birds are doing. Notice if the bird is flying, standing, or swimming. Then find a bird with some red on it, some yellow, and some black. No need to identify, just observe!
- Take an old blanket outside to sit on the dirt or grass and notice all that is outside - clouds, trees, people, flowers, other people.
- Remember to dress for the weather.
Happenings Around the Community

Madison has many fun places to visit. The Capitol, parks, and the zoo are just a few examples. You will surely enjoy the experience! During your visit, engage your children with the experience:

- Pretend that you (or your child) are the tour guide for the site and describe all of the important information that a tourist would want to know.
- Ask your child questions about what he/she is noticing and wondering while you are at the site.
- Do a scavenger hunt to find specific things while visiting.
- Ask your child what was most memorable about the visit. Share what was most memorable for you.
- When you get home, draw pictures and write about your visit. Share these with other family members.

Children’s Digital Usage

Digital Citizenship is the idea that we should behave and interact just as responsibly in online spaces as we do in the real world. In our increasingly connected society, this means equipping students with the technology necessary for learning, while teaching them to use it in an appropriate and responsible manner.
